

JAIYA

If the land could sing, its voice would be Jaiya. This trio from the wild, west coast of Canada puts heart and soul into making music that celebrates our connection to the earth and to one another. Audiences find their live performances, which often incorporate elements of ritual and theatre, “powerfully uplifting”, “moving,” and “stirring.” Reviewers and Radio Hosts from Canada and the US, to Australia and Europe are raving about the band’s two albums, Firedance and Beltane, praising Jaiya’s expert musicianship and their life-affirming vision.

All three members of Jaiya are multi-instrumentalists who collaborate on writing and arranging their original music. Together they play harp, piano, accordion, guitar, flutes, hand drums and percussion. Over this rich instrumental framework soar Miranda Brown’s and Lael Whitehead’s sublime vocal harmonies and evocative lyrics. The result is a tonic for our troubled times. Jaiya truly “waves a magick wand that goes straight to your soul” (Boudica Reviews).
